

Are you looking for a new challenge? Are you passionate about efficiency and food production?

If so we are seeking a Senior Project Engineer to join our team in Melbourne. As a process engineer at Wiley you will have the opportunity to work on a wide variety of production processes across Australasia's diverse food manufacturing industry. We are particularly interested in people with an electrical or mechanical engineering background as well as experience in the meat industry.

THE PERSON

- Experience within the food processing industry, meat manufacturing experience highly valued
- Minimum 10 years engineering experience (in engineering manager or project manager roles)
- A Bachelor of Engineering is required for these roles, preferably electrical (specialising in automation and control) or mechanical
- The ability to interface and build a rapport with a variety of people
- Successful applicants will have enthusiasm to learn the Wiley way and contribute to the constant innovation across all aspects of what we do
- Those who join Wiley have a passion for quality, integrity, future focus, a sense of community and exhibit behaviour that empowers those they work with

THE POSITION

- Lead design and engineer production processes
- Opportunity to manage and be involved directly in the design, construction and commissioning of production lines and facilities
- Manage Engineering projects throughout a project's lifecycle
- Opportunity to build relationships across Wiley and the food industry
- Exposure to estimating, budgeting and contract administration
- Our engineers are office-based with regular short-term travel required
- You will be joining a team with experience across all areas of food production

THE DIFFERENCE
